College of Complexes - Statement on Free Speech

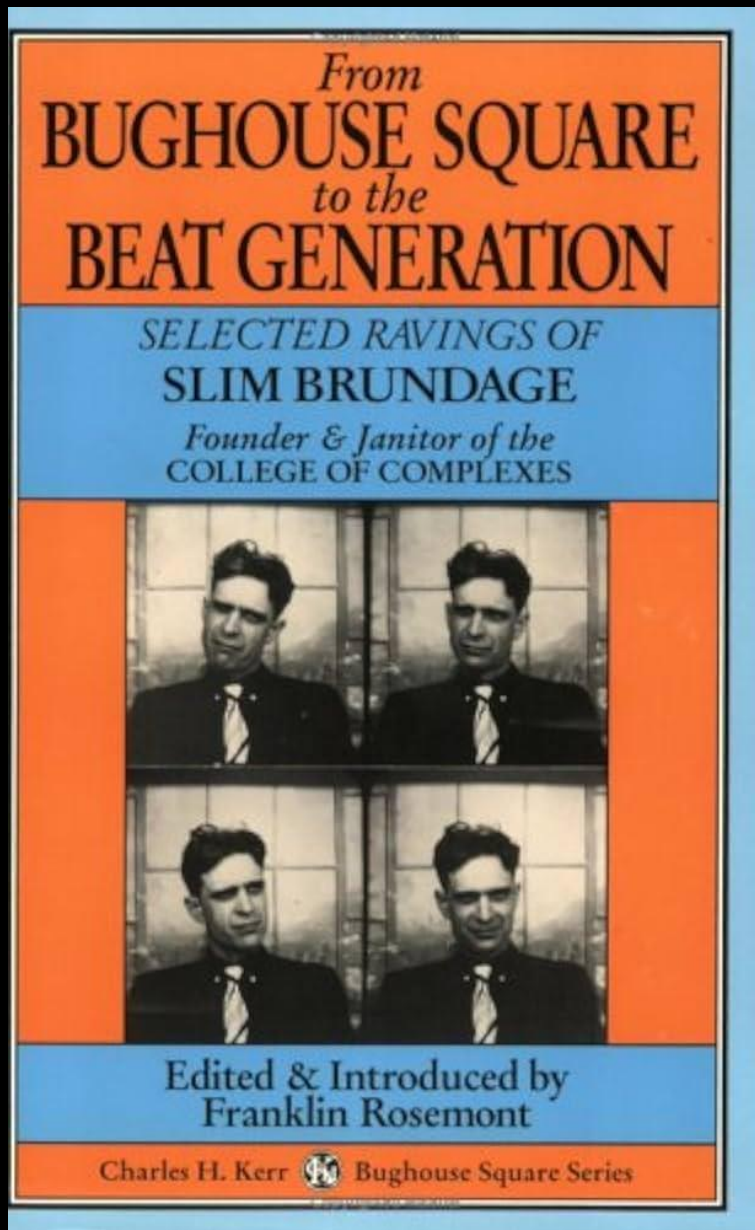

Our constitution and laws encourage the freest possible exchange of opinions, ideas, and information. In part, that recognizes our worth and dignity as human beings. To forbid us to speak our minds demeans us and makes us more like slaves or robots than citizens of a free country. But as important as freedom of expression is for us as individuals, it is perhaps more important to society at large.

The underground in Chicago knew him as J.J. Jameson; the Massachusetts penal system knew him as Norman A. Porter Jr., a murderer who escaped in 1985.

In 2005, Porter/Jameson was arrested in Chicago. “It’s been a good 20-year run,” he told the police at the time. Now in his mid-70s, Porter is up for parole in Boston.
