

ELECTION RE-CAP

By Charles Paidock

Back in the summer I got my new hat and hit the campaign trail for victory in 2020

Federal employees were reminded by email to not engage in "partisan political events"

Electioneering activities while on the job:
14 Trump admin officials had been found to have violated the law a total of 54 times. At least an additional 22 officials are under investigation for nearly 100 more violations.

Two Campaign Styles

Inept Political Messaging

Protesters were driven out of the area by force to clear a path for the President.

"Is that your Bible?" a reporter asked.

"It's a Bible," Mr Trump replied.

And then he left.

Since the passage of the Pendleton Act in 1883, the core principle of American bureaucracy has been that it sought to provide politically unbiased information to policymakers

With no federal governmental data collection, it's hard to measure the disease, track its trend, and build effective policy

Biden over Trump by 30 points among voters 65 and older (59% to 29%)

Seniors are angry at Trump's prioritizing the re-opening of the U.S. economy over their health and protection

Voter Suppression

Poll workers gave specific writing instruments, such as Sharpies, only to specific voters to cause their ballots to be rejected.

The Urban-Rural Divide

Transportation can be a barrier to voting.

A study from Tufts University found that 29% of young voters (ages 18-29) who didn't vote in the 2016 general election cited "no transportation to a polling place" as a contributing factor.

GOP begins pushing back against Trump's false election claims

But most of the Republican pushback has come from predictable corners: lawmakers who are retiring, already out of office or have already earned reputations for being Trump critics.

And some top Republicans such as House Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy have raced to defend Trump, illustrating his tight grip on the party and suggesting a GOP-led intervention isn't coming anytime soon.

Slates of electors selected by voters convene in all 50 states to formally cast their votes for president

January 6, 2021 at 1 PM

The sitting Vice President, acting as the Senate president, presides over a joint session of Congress to read aloud the certificates cast by the electors representing all 50 states and D.C. in alphabetical order to finalize the vote count.

If no members of Congress object to any of the certificates in writing, the Senate president officially certifies the selection of the president-elect and vice president-elect.
